Pedagogy and the “Other” – Teaching Difficult Subjects

Dr. Julia Jordan-Zachery, Director of Black Studies and Professor of Political Science

Race, among other topics, can be a challenge to teach as it can elicit a myriad of feelings that might leave some feeling uncomfortable. But does that mean that we don't teach these "uncomfortable" subjects? I argue no. There is a way of teaching through the resistance and discomfort. In this interactive workshop we will explore how to teach when you and/or your students are "uncomfortable" with the subject(s). Specifically, we will not just talk about how to teach, but actually practice teaching with specific scenarios.
